

Paul Kelley, PE, PMP

Paul Kelley is a native of Georgia, raised in Lawrenceville and attended Gwinnett County schools from elementary through high school. He graduated from Georgia Tech in 2005 where he attended classes at the Savannah Campus in Pooler, GA. He was learning remotely before “remote” became so popular. Paul is first committed as a husband and father. He has been married for 17 years (officially, unofficially 22) and has five children: three boys and two girls (in that order). Paul has been working as a Project Manager for HNTB over the last three years. His past experience includes work at LAI Engineering, US FWS, MARTA, and Atkins. He is a 2022 graduate of the ACEC Engineering Leadership Academy.

Paul strives to learn in all aspects of his life. Continuing education, personal and professional growth are essential for the start of his day. He believes if we aren't learning, we aren't growing and that a good life requires self-reflection and goal setting for constant improvement. He looks for opportunities to learn through listening to Audible on his hour commute, podcasts while running, taking formal trainings, or even just getting out of his comfort zone like speaking on this panel. He looks forward to using this opportunity to help mentor others desiring a more fulfilling life and career.
