

Eve Errickson
General Counsel
Pond & Company

Eve Errickson is an attorney with long experience in the area of design and construction law. Prior to becoming General Counsel for Pond & Company, she previously worked at the Smithsonian Institution in the capacity of lead transactional attorney and contracting officer for Smithsonian Facilities.

Pond & Company, Inc., is a full service architecture and engineering firm engaged in the performance of projects for clients in the US, Latin America, Europe, Asia and the Pacific. As their general counsel, Eve provides legal advice and review on emerging business risks and legal developments affecting projects supported by public and private funding.

Her notable projects while at the Smithsonian include the Revitalization of the National Air and Space Museum, the Renovation of the Renwick Gallery, and the Renovation of Halls 2-6 of the National Museum of Natural History.

Eve completed her Master of Arts in American Studies at the George Washington University, her Juris Doctorate at the University of Cincinnati, and undergraduate degree from the University of Tennessee. She is active in publishing on law governing cultural heritage, cultural landscapes, contracting, construction, and architecture. She is an expert member of UNESCO's scientific subcommittee on Law, Administration and Finance.
